Countdown is on for Australia's largest tertiary studies and careers expo

Get ready to boost your education and career opportunities at Australia's largest Tertiary Studies and Careers Expo (TSXPO) at the Brisbane Showgrounds this weekend.

The 42nd TSXPO is expected to welcome thousands of students, parents, mature age and post graduate students looking for expert advice about the myriad of tertiary options available.

The expo will also welcome career seekers of all ages hoping to redirect their careers by finding expert information and guidance under the one roof.

Around 80 exhibitors including the nation's leading universities, TAFE, Defence Force Recruiting, Queensland Police, international colleges, industry associations and beauty and hospitality academies will be on hand to discuss new trends in further education, training and employment.

Visitors can also attend more than 100 free expert seminars and inspirational and informative employment and education talks focusing on topics such as individual faculty programs, new study options, tertiary admissions processes, and career pathways.

Current student representatives will also be available to discuss what it is really like to study a particular subject, and to answer visitor questions.

Brisbane Showgrounds General Manager of Venue Sales and Marketing Jago Coyle said they were looking forward to hosting the nation's largest and most well attended tertiary education and careers expo.

"With so much career and training information now available online, it can be difficult and overwhelming to know what recommendations are best to follow," he said.

"The Expo has a multitude of experts on hand who can advise people of all ages how best to plan their tertiary education or their next career move.

The TSXPO will be held this Saturday and Sunday (July 15-16) from 10am to 4pm each day at the Royal International Convention Centre at the Brisbane Showgrounds. Entry is free.
